With respect to claims 1, 6 and 9, the prior art fails to teach or suggest a method of forming a layered polishing pad by forming double-sided pressure sensitive adhesive layers on opposing surfaces of a subpad with a nip roller to form a double laminated subpad, the double laminated subpad having a nip exit angle through the nip roller, controlling the nip exit angle to 0 degrees +/- 3 degrees over a travel length to limit curling of the double laminated subpad, and securing a polishing pad layer to the double laminated subpad.

*It is noted that the 1.132 Declaration filed on 8/24/06 only restated that which is now being claimed by Applicant and therefore had no bearing on the allowability of the present claims.
